SUMMARY OF THE COURSE

This course explores the historical, political and social context of Indigenous education in Australia and critically examines the social and societal factors that shape both Indigenous and non-Indigenous students' experiences and outcomes. It introduces students to current research, theoretical frameworks and practical strategies to help in developing their skills and knowledge to critically reflect on and respond to Indigenous issues in education. A central focus for the course is preparing students to meet the Australian Professional Standards that directly concern Indigenous education: the teaching of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students (AITSL 1.4), and the embedding of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander perspectives, histories and heritage across the curriculum (AITSL 2.4).

THE MAIN WAYS IN WHICH THE COURSE HAS CHANGED SINCE LAST TIME AS A RESULT OF STUDENT FEEDBACK:

▪ A concentrated focus on Indigenous issues to meet NESA requirements and groupings by program (i.e. secondary, primary) for the Indigenous Immersion program.

4. RATIONALE FOR THE INCLUSION OF CONTENT AND TEACHING APPROACH

The approach to teaching and learning is informed by research. This research has demonstrated the importance of the learning environment for quality student learning. Therefore, emphasis is placed on a learning environment which is knowledge-centred, learner-centred, assessment-centred and community-centred (Bransford & Donovan, 2005). A learner-centred environment encourages attention to students' existing ideas, knowledge, skills, emotions and attitudes providing a foundation for learning. A knowledge-centred environment focuses on what is taught, why it is taught, how it should be taught and what competence looks like. Essential to the student and knowledge-centred environments is assessment, which makes student learning visible and supports learning. A community-centred environment recognises that learning is influenced by context.

The teaching, learning, and assessment activities in this course are designed to provide students with the skills, knowledge and disposition to assist them with developing an informed and critically aware approach to working with diverse students and the embedding of knowledges, perspectives and histories in teaching and learning. The course is underpinned by a relational approach to critically engaging with the social, political, ethical and philosophical framing of what has come to be known as 'Indigenous/multicultural education' in Australia. The teaching approach works with a culturally responsive framing that aims to foster a socio- political consciousness that can sustain transformative future education practices.

5. TEACHING STRATEGIES

Teaching strategies used during the course will include:
- small group cooperative learning to understand the importance of teamwork in an educational context and to demonstrate the use of group structures as appropriate to address teaching and learning goals;
- explicit teaching including lectures and a range of strategies to foster interest and support learning;
- structured occasions for reflection on learning to allow students to reflect critically on issues discussed;
- opportunities for whole group and small group dialogue and discussion, allowing students the opportunity to demonstrate their capacity to communicate; and
- online learning from readings and web links on the Moodle website.

After each session you should:
- consolidate and review your notes and additional materials;
- research and read around specific issues and areas of interest;
- consider points raised in discussion and/or feedback you've been given; and
- prepare, plan, research and draft assignments.

6. COURSE CONTENT

Part 1: Matraville Indigenous Immersion Program (July 17-19, 2019)

Program Overview:
This intensive "on country" immersion program will introduce and engage Master of Teaching students with the local Aboriginal communities, their culture and perspectives to raise students' awareness about the need for a focus on Indigenous perspectives in schools and in teacher education. It will ensure that TESs are immersed in practical experiences that will lay the foundations for more formal input and strategies for teaching Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students (1.4), as well as understanding and respecting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people to promote reconciliation between Indigenous and non-Indigenous Australians (2.4).

Community Partnership:
The program will be held at the UNSW Matraville Learning Centre at Matraville High School. The school, its staff, its Aboriginal students and the local Aboriginal Education Consultative Group (AECG) are in partnership in the creation and delivery of the content of this program, and local community members are involved in leading a Walk on Country in Kamay Botany Bay National Park.

Expectations:
Students will be expected to take notes on program content and their development of understandings, and to use those understandings to develop a reflection statement which they will draw on for their formal assessment in EDST 5115. Prior to the Immersion Program, students are also expected to engage with key readings and consider areas they would like to discuss further.

Please note the three-day Indigenous Immersion Program is a requisite for this course. You cannot successfully complete this course unless you have satisfactorily completed the Indigenous Immersion program. More details are available on Moodle.

Immersion Program Preparation	This module is about getting ready for the Immersion Program. This counts as one of your lectures and tutorials, so please ensure that you have engaged with the readings, learning activities before our first meeting at Matraville. This must be completed before attending the Immersion Program at Matraville. Details are available on Moodle.	Lowe et al. (2014) Yamanouchi (2010) Lohoar, Butera & Kennedy (2014)
1	An introduction to the landscape of Indigenous education Course welcome and overview. This session will start by identifying and describing the range of ways in which the social, cultural and political contexts of education impact on school systems, schools and teachers, and discuss the policy, curriculum and pedagogical challenges and opportunities of linguistic, cultural, religious and socioeconomic diversity within our schools and communities. This session examines multiculturalism as a social policy response to cultural and linguistic diversity in Australian education, from early assimilationist approaches though to integration through to multiculturalism and its variants, and the similarities and differences between multicultural and Indigenous education policies and practices. The session will then interrogate the 'peaceful settler' narrative that continues to serve as the basis for how Australian history, and hence, the relationships between Indigenous and non-Indigenous Australia, are 'known' and represented – how are you connected with this history, and why does it matter?	Stanesby & Thomas (ch 5) Banks (2009)
2	Why learn about Indigenous perspectives, what to learn, and different ways of learning This session will critically consider the place of 'Indigenous perspectives' within policy and curriculum documents, with a view to questioning the difficulties and possibilities for non-Indigenous educators to embed Indigenous knowledges, histories, and ways of knowing in T&L – why are Indigenous perspectives and ways of knowing often simplified and co- opted to provide a 'one size fits all approach' for the education system? How can teachers work with Indigenous oral traditions, pedagogies, knowledges, histories and heritage in constructive, thoughtful, engaging and culturally responsive ways in teaching and learning?	Phillips (ch 2) Lowe & Yunkaporta (2013)
3	Racism, tokenism, and Aboriginalism in T&L This session examines schooling practices that contribute to preserving and protecting concerns to do with race, and looks into some of the misconceptions and misunderstandings about Indigenous knowledges, histories and heritage that can influence teaching and learning practices in problematic ways – despite the good intentions of many, why does racism and stereotyping continue as an everyday practice?	Downey & Hart (ch 7)
4	Critical approaches to Indigenous education and cultural diversity This session will examine the impact of more critical approaches to Indigenous education, and similar developments internationally, including the ethnicisation of educational achievement, the myth of the model minority, and the globalisation of education.	May (2009)

5	Culturally responsive Schooling, the politics and practices of knowledge, and critical self-reflection	Vass (2017)
	This session will look further into the contested and challenging requirements for all teachers to think and work critically in connection with the knowledges being constructed by learners in their classrooms, including locating yourself in the landscape of education, and articulating your philosophical, ethical and political vision for dealing with diversity – What sort of knowledge/curriculum are we constructing and why (not)? What sort of schools/classrooms/teachers/students are we constructing and why (not)?	Lampert (ch 6) Burnett, Lampert & Crilly (2013)
	The session concludes with ways to evaluate current multicultural, anti-racism, and Aboriginal education policies, programs and services and their role in contributing to student outcomes and the equity and quality of school education.

Part 2: University based classes

Each module consists of three hours face to face instructional time combining lectures and tutorials, plus readings, online activities and discussion.

Assessment Details

ASSESSMENT TASK 1: Personal Policy Perspective

Purpose/s:

(i) Critically reflect on your own educational experience and understanding of the AITSL 1.4 and 2.4 requirements; and
(ii) Identify, outline and justify how you will approach the curricula and pedagogic practices connected with improving the representation of Indigenous knowledges in your teaching and the engagement and achievements of Indigenous students.

The task:
This task draws on your observations and reflections from the Indigenous Immersion Program and your other interactions with Aboriginal histories, cultures and communities, and links these practical experiences to a close analytical reading of some of the key literature. This task is designed to provide you with an opportunity to develop a deeper understanding of the professional role, responsibilities and practices involved in effectively addressing and improving the visibility of Indigenous perspectives in the curriculum and the engagement and achievement of Indigenous learners in schooling.

To complete this task …

Use your research skills to locate and critically engage with a range of relevant academic literature to create a personal statement that frames your 'teacher standpoint', responsibilities and future approach to working with Indigenous students and curricular perspectives. Your 'standpoint' or personal policy statement will need to address the following issues in terms of explaining what you plan to do as a teacher, and importantly why this approach is suitable/responsive:

- Your identity and cultural location – understanding your own background and how it shapes your world view;
- The diversity of student identities – avoiding deficits and stereotypes; working with plurality and fluidity; understanding the importance of context;

- Family and community – effectively and meaningfully engaging your students' families and communities in decision-making connected with schooling;
- Curriculum and pedagogy – considering appropriate representation of Indigenous perspectives in the curriculum/'good practices' for the classroom; and
- The Australian Professional Standards for Teachers – your professional role and responsibilities.

 # Please Note: Your task should include an introduction and conclusion, with the issues outlined above being used as sub-headings that help structure your task. For this task, a minimum of eight (8) quality sources should be used to support the task. See Appendix below for relevant examples to use as starting point

ASSESSMENT TASK 2: Resources Portfolio

Purpose/s:

(i) Based in publicly available information (school website, MySchool, etc), describe and critically evaluate the ways in which your placement school for PE1/2 addresses the learning strengths and needs of students from diverse linguistic, cultural, religious and socioeconomic backgrounds, including Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander backgrounds, and the extent to which it incorporates multicultural and Indigenous perspectives across the curriculum.

(ii) Based on your analysis, compile at least 8 relevant Indigenous-oriented resources, including people, places and perspectives (e.g. films, media, books, etc.) suitable for teaching and learning in your classroom. Explain the potential use of each of these resources, and how it will be used to support learning and teaching in your discipline area, and justify your choices with reference to your perceptions of the school's needs for additional material and resources, the professional policy requirements involved (e.g. AITSL standards, syllabus documents, and Cross-Curriculum Priorities) with reference to academic research literature.

The task:

This post-course task is designed to give students the opportunity to critically consider what is involved with compiling and using resources that include a focus on Indigenous and culturally and linguistically diverse representations, knowledges, heritage and/or histories. This task aligns with the AITSL Professional Standard 2.4, which requires all teachers to embed Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander perspectives in the curriculum, as well as with 1.3 and 1.4. The task will provide students with a strong foundation for their classroom teaching.

To complete this task …

1. You will locate academic literature that is relevant to critical Indigenous and culturally and linguistically diverse studies in your teaching area. It is expected that for this task you will refer to a minimum of ten (10) academic sources - government reports/policies and webpages are not viewed as credible academic sources. However, may be included in addition to your minimum of 10 academic sources.

2. Use the literature to investigate suggestions regarding 'good practice' use of resources in the classroom. This should focus in particular on the curricular and pedagogical practices that teachers must consider in connection with what should be avoided and why, but more importantly, what can be done, how, and why.

3. Prepare a submission that outlines the 8 resources (250 word maximum description each, with weblink or other source provided), plus a 2000 word commentary which provides a concise summary of your key reasons for including these resources for teaching and learning in support of the learning needs and outcomes you have identified from your research into the school and your understanding of the needs of all students. A gentle reminder that diversity should be seen as a resource for all learners, not a deficit to be addressed by a few.
