SUMMARY OF COURSE

The purpose of this course is to introduce you to different research approaches, research methodologies, and methods used in education research. The course will prepare you for conducting your own research project including identifying and formulating a research question; selecting and applying appropriate research approaches and methodologies; and writing a rationale for methods of research investigation in education.

THE MAIN WAYS IN WHICH THE COURSE HAS CHANGED SINCE LAST TIME AS A RESULT OF STUDENT FEEDBACK:

- The course has been decoupled from EDST5448 to better tailor the material for the doctoral level.

STUDENT LEARNING OUTCOMES

Outcomes	Assessment/s
1	Formulate a research question consistent with an underlying research methodology for a high-quality research project in education.	2
2	Explain the relationship between different types of research questions, theory, and methodology.	1, 2
3	Select and document an appropriate research approach and methodology, including a rationale for a high-quality research project in education.	2
4	Articulate a research plan for a high-quality research project in education.	1

4. RATIONALE FOR THE INCLUSION OF CONTENT AND TEACHING APPROACH

The content of the course is to provide students with an overview of the different research approaches, research methodologies and methods used in education. The teaching approach attempts to actively engage students as they discuss different research approaches, designs, and methods; and learn new information and skills. Students will be required to take responsibility for their own learning in this course.

5. TEACHING STRATEGIES

The course is delivered online and provides a flexible learning environment for students. Within this learning environment students will engage with course material through online lectures that incorporate material presented by a variety of experts in education. Online weekly activities will use a range of teaching strategies to encourage students to engage in critical thinking and problem solving in the application of a range of research methods in the investigation of educational contexts. Online discussion forums will allow students to engage in collaborative inquiry, challenging and refining ideas and sharing current practice. Self-directed reading will broaden student understanding of the range of research methods that can be applied to investigate educational contexts. The preparation of written assignments will draw on student reflection of a range of research methods appropriate in investigations of educational contexts.

Assessment Details

Assessment Task 1 – Research plan (40%)

In this task you are asked to develop a plan for conducting a research project in education (approximately 2000 words, including references). To meet the requirements of this task you are expected to:

- Respond to five stimulus questions
What is the problem, what do you need to know, what is rejected, who are the leading thinkers, and what are the common approaches for investigating it?
- Include a reference list of cited works

Assessment Task 2 – Research methodology (60%)

In no more than 4000 words, you are to document a research methodology, including a rationale for a research project, in education. You should:

- Set out the problem (approximately 500 words). This includes - what is the problem, its scale and scope, and why it is significant/relevant.
- Write a short critical review of literature on the topic (approximately 1000 words). This can, and should, draw on the work in the previous task.
- Write a plan for how you propose to go about the work (approximately 1500 words).
- Provide a list of resources / skills you need to develop to undertake the work (up to 500 words). This is designed to facilitate thinking through what you need for the project.
- A statement of feasibility as to how you will finish the project on-time (approximately 500 words).
